SKIM — Recruitment

Re: Market Insights Analyst — Health & Wellness (Rotterdam)

Tilburg, 19 August 2026

Your ad describes deciding whether a client should raise a price, or which products to launch or drop — questions about how people actually decide. That is what my two degrees were for: a BSc in Economics and an MSc in Data Science & Society, both at Tilburg. I have been doing this kind of work on my own initiative for two years now. I measured online-booking adoption across 10,605 businesses in Mexico City end to end — 722 structured queries, deduplication, two independent detection methods and public-registry enrichment — and delivered a 9,878-row qualified dataset with a dashboard on top of it.

I care most about research that survives scrutiny. I tested whether prediction markets price weather observations efficiently and published the null result: the apparent edge did not survive fees and spread. In a valuation platform I built for football transfer markets, I audited my own backtest, found it had been overstating performance roughly threefold through look-ahead bias in how prices were dated, rebuilt it, and reported the smaller honest number. That instinct — asking what would have to be true for this to be wrong — seems to me the core of good insights work.

Professionally, at Netvice I built the operational analytics environment from scratch and spent the year translating messy reality into numbers people acted on, working with stakeholders from the floor up to the founder. I am comfortable with large files in Excel, write Python and SQL, and I have not yet run conjoint or discrete-choice studies — that is the part I would be learning, and it is a large part of why the role appeals.

Practical notes: English and Spanish are native for me and my Dutch is A2 and improving; I live in Tilburg, so Rotterdam is an easy commute. I am a non-EU national on a Dutch highly-skilled-migrant permit, so SKIM would need to take over the sponsorship — SKIM is on the IND register, so this is administrative. I would love to talk.
